QUILLOTINE EXECUTION IN PARIS. The Paris correspondent of the Boston Traveller gives the particulars of the execution of Nicholas Parong by the guillotine: It was painted red throughout, and consis ted of a staging accessible by a flight of stairs, and rising six feet from the ground, the summit surrounded by a low rail. In the centre of the floor thus offered were planted two stout uprights, a foot and a half apart, and eight or ten high. These were grooved for the passage of the knife -a broad, dull blade, weighing, as I informed, one hundred and fifty pounds-which was drawn up and attached to the cross-piece above, ready to descend on the pressure of a spring. On the floor, and facing the interval between these posts, is placed a long, low framework or car, which runs forward on grooves, and a plank hinged to one extremity of this car falls forward upon it. In preparing for an execution, this plank is raised so as to be at right angles to the car, and the criminal, on ascending the steps, is marched forward against the plank. Being suddenly pushed from behind, he falls with the plank upon the car, and the pressure of his body causes clamps to spring over him from below, effectually restraining all movements. The same impulse gives motion to the car, which glides rapidly forward, and the lunette (a half circle of wood) at once imprisoning the neck, the axe descends.

As the clock struck eight, the gates of the 5,485 Prizes amounting to ... prison opened, and two men in black came forward, supporting between them the criminal-a short, athletic mau-his throat and chest bared, and his head uncovered. He mounted the scaffold with an uncertain and mounted the scaffold with an uncertain and faltering step, fell for a moment on his kuces.

Certificates of Packages, 10 Whole Tickets..... $80 and then, rising, was marched up to the upright plank. The executioner and his assistant took hold of him from behind, and, at a given signal, pushed him forward on the car. We heard the rumbling of the wheels, the click of the lunette, and saw a man standing behind the posts grasp hold of the head, to steady it. The dull fall of the knife next reached our ears, and we saw a headless body lifted into a long box, which stood ready to receive it. This was at once lifted into a cart and driven off the ground. . 1 Prize of I have described the deed minutely, but the length of the account gives no idea of the actual rapidity. Not a minute and a half elasped from the time that the crimonal appeared at the gate of the prison, before his body was hurried from the spot.

THE GAIETY OF PARIS.

A stranger in Paris, even during those seasons that a Parisian would consider dull and dreary, is astonished by the glitter, pomp and brilliancy which greet him on every hand, as well as by the throngs of pedestrians and vehicles that are constantly crowding its avenues. The season of gaiety sets in about the middle of July and to see Paris in all its brightness we are here just in the proper time. Broadway in New York astonishes the American visitor, as Cheapside or Fleet streets in London does the provincial Englishman, but Paris is at all times what New York would be with a half dozen Broadways crossing it at every angle, or what London would be with Fleet streets and Cheapsides permeating through every section of its wide-apread limits. The Englishmen and the American spend most of their time within doors, but the Frenchman is never happy unless out in the open air, the wheel, with the amount of the prize that each and nothing but cold weather or a rain storm one is entitled to, will be published after every from the island, without drying or selection of can prevent him from seeking the amuse- drawing in the following papers: Augusta (Geo.) specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be to 11 ments of the Champs d'Elsyees, a shady seat in the gardens of the Tuileries, the Luxembourg, or the Palais Royal, or a promenade on Rue Rivoli, or the Boulevards. Paris has been built to suit the peculiar tastes of its inhabitants in this respect, and its gardens, public squares and parks are as far in advance as those of London are in advance of New York. The Park de Bologue, with its fountains, immense artifical lakes, grottoes and cascades, extends over an area of almost as tion of Chlorine in water, which is of uniform many miles as Hyde Park covers acres, and arrength, stronger in Chlorine than the best Chlothe suburban resorts of Paris, as the Palace gardens of Versailles, St. Could and Fontain Dr. R. H. STABLER, Chemist, bleau, astonish the visitors at their immense extent, as well as by the total disregard of cost with which they are beautified and orna-

SLOW AT IMROVEMENTS.

The sewing machine and the carpet sweeper, both of which are common household articles in this country, are yet only experiments in England. The sewing machine is used only in the larger clothing establishments of England but the English journals which treat of mechanical improvements think it will some day become an article of household furniture. The carpet-sweeper has quite delighted Prince Albert, by sweeping up clean the ashes from his cigar, which he had purposely dropped upon the floor!

SOMBRERO GUANO. N calling the attention of the public to this valuable and recently discovered deposit of this fertilizing article, we will merely state, that like all other phosphatic GUANOS, its most valuable constituent is phosphoric acid, or bone phosphate of lime; and that its mercantile value, as compared with other GI ANOS of its kind, may be easily determined by the smount of phosphoric acid or bone phosphate of lime it contains. In order, there fore, to give the public a thorough knowledge of phosphate of lime it contains.
